A CLASSIFICATION OF OCCUPATIONS

INTRODUCTION

In the introduction to the "Classification of Occupations" prepared for the census of 1931 in England and Wales, the following statement appears: "Mankind in its working capacity may be classified for statistical purposes according to two classifications, the one 'occupational' and the other 'industrial'.... The occupation of any person is the kind of work he or she performs, and this alone determines the particular group in an occupational classification to which the person is assigned. The nature of the factory, business or service in which the person is employed has no bearing upon the classification of his occupation, except to the extent that it enables the nature of his duties to be more clearly defined.....As a single business will employ a number of individuals of widely varying occupations for the purpose of affording a particular service or creating a particular product, it will be seen that the industrial classification differs essentially from the occupational in that the latter only takes account of the nature of the work performed by the individual, while the former has regard only to the nature of the service or product to which his labour contributes. The man who is occupationally a carpenter, for instance, is classified industrially to building, if employed by a builder, or to brewing, if employed by a brewer.....It is a person's occupation, i.e.—, the nature of his work, which determines the type and degree of strains, physical or mental, to which he is subjected. This is in the main independent of his industrial association. Hence it follows that a satisfactory occupational classification must ignore the irrelevant consideration of industry, grouping together, e.g., all clerks, whether employed in insurance, trade, or railway transport, etc. But industrial association, grouping together persons, whatever their occupation, who contribute their labour to a particular service or product, is also of prime importance, largely from the economic point of view, e.g., as affecting unemployment, and as in the aggregate affording a record of industrial development."

This statement clearly indicates the difference between what may be termed the occupational and industrial associations of the worker. It also suggests the purposes that these two classifications may serve.

The Classification of Occupations which has been devised for the seventh census of Canada is based upon the principles of the material worked in and the process performed, and for the non-productive occupations, type of service individually rendered, while degree of skill is also taken into account. Nevertheless, it will be noted that the classification includes such occupational designations as "Cigar maker," "Glove maker," etc. But although product, the basis for a classification of industries rather than occupations, is not mentioned in the statement of the principles on which the present classification is based, it has been found impossible to exclude it altogether. This is largely due to the fact that the tendency to specialization is not complete, and one worker may still perform most of the operations in the making of a specific product. It should be added that when an expression such as "Cigarmaker" appears in an occupational classification, it includes as a class only those persons actually engaged in manipulating tobacco in the manufacture of cigars and not those employed in the industry whose work is only indirectly related to the product, e.g., machinists engaged in adjusting and repairing cigar-making machines.

In conformity with the basis of the classification occupational classes have been arranged in convenient groups, the wood-working classes together, the metal-working occupational classes in another group, and so on. It seemed practicable to have the building trades together, hence the appearance in the building and construction group of occupations, of such metal-working trades as "Plumbers," "Sheet Metal Workers" and "Structural Iron Workers." An exception was made for "Stone Cutters" though they might have been included in the building group instead of being assigned to the non-metallic mineral group in accordance with the main principle of the classification. However, irrespective of what group was chosen for the inclusion of any particular occupational class, it must be remembered it was largely a question of convenience. What is important is that every "Stone cutter," for example, whether employed in Building, at a Stoneryard or Quarry, will in the occupational classification be assigned to the same class.

It will be noticed that the class "Labourers" does not appear in any of the groups except the primary ones of Agriculture and Mining. They have been relegated to a residual class at the end of the classification. With the exceptions mentioned, and in the logging group where the labourer has been assigned to the class "Lumbering," no attempt will be made to classify them occupationally according to the principles of the classification. This procedure will be followed for the reason that sufficient evidence as to the nature of the work from such descriptions as "Labourer—Steel Mill," "Labourer—Furniture Factory" is lacking to warrant one in concluding that the one is a metal-working labourer and the other a wood-worker, even though they may be found in metal and wood-working industries, respectively. As to agriculture, mining, and logging, the presumption is that the labourer will in most cases be a farm labourer, a mine-working labourer, or a lumberman. However, this residual class of "Labourers" will be divided into the main industrial divisions for tabular purposes.

Such classes as "Owners, Managers," "Foreman, Overseers" occur in most of the groups throughout the classification. This division is followed even in an occupational classification because the nature of the duties of such persons is largely dependent upon the business in which they are engaged. However, the clerical group of occupations are treated in a purely occupational fashion, all stenographers, for example, being consigned to the one class, irrespective of industry.

The 398 classes that make up the classification vary considerably in degree of preciseness, in breadth, and in homogeneity. They are in the main the resultant of the relative importance attached to the necessities of historical comparison, to the need of devising a structure capable of fitting the quality of occupational data characteristic of census taking, and to the desirability of modifying procedure to meet such changes as have taken place in the occupational field during the past decennial period.

INSTRUCTIONS TO CODING CLERKS

1. The schedules are to be coded in column 28 in regard to the personal occupation followed by every one gainfully employed.

2. In assigning code numbers to the occupations appearing on the schedules the coders will consult the Alphabetical List of Occupations. Each occupation found here is provided with a code number designating the class to which it belongs, i.e., its place in the Classified List of Occupations.

3. Where the expression "Income" occurs in the occupational column the code number 650 will be given.

4. Housewives not gainfully employed will be returned as "Homemakers," and as such will, of course, not be coded.

5. Though a comprehensive Alphabetical List of Occupations with their code numbers has been compiled, it is not expected that it will completely cover the variety of ways in which occupational descriptions may be stated. Sometimes a description may be found in inverted form in the List. For example, if on the schedules one should find the term "Turner" in column 28 followed by the word "axles," i.e., "Turner, axles—Car Shop," and the description does not appear as such in the Alphabetical List it will be found under "Axle Turner."

6. All occupational designations not found in one place or another in the List are to be referred to a supervisor. Any additions to the List will be made only after the supervisor decides such are necessary contributions.

7. The supervisor will be consulted in cases where females have been returned as following occupations usually restricted to males, e.g., bricklayers, furnacemen, etc. Again where young persons are returned as following occupations or professions inconsistent with their age, e.g., a boy of 16 returned as a "Dentist," such cases must be referred to the supervisor.

8. It may happen that the description of the person's business is entered in column 28, rather than the occupation pursued. For example, such an entry as "Grocery business" may be found in the occupational column with the term "Dealer" in the industry column. In such cases the information in the industry column indicates the nature of the occupation.

9. Such vague returns as "Worker" or "Employee" may occur. In such instances the other facts on the schedule sometimes will throw some light on the actual nature of the work. Particularly will this be true where a term as "Engineer" is found with no description of the kind of engineer entered. Other evidence, such as place of work, "Boat," "Steam railway," "Boiler house" coupled, possibly, with information in the Earnings Column, may serve to disclose whether the person is a technical, a stationary, a locomotive, etc., engineer. However, all cases of this kind must be brought to the attention of the supervisor.

10. On schedules with boarders or lodgers in excess of the number of persons in the family and no person on the schedule returned as "Lodging House Keeper," the head of the house or, if the head is returned as following a definite occupation, his wife or other female relative is to be coded as a Lodging House Keeper.

11. The letters E, O, and W appear quite frequently in the Alphabetical List of Occupations. It is important that the coders understand the distinctions they designate. Whenever the letter E follows such occupations as Contractor, Furrier, Gardener, etc., it indicates that should such terms appear on a schedule with the letter E in Col. 30, they are to be coded to the "Owners, Managers" groups concerned, should such exist. Of course, the term "Gardener" would be coded to the class "Gardeners, Florists, Nurserymen" if an employer (E). If the letters O (O.A.) or W should be found in Col. 30, the Contractor, in Painting for instance, would be coded to 343 not 330, and the Furrier to 102 not 100. However, the Gardener (O) would be coded to the class "Gardeners, Florists, Nurserymen," while the Gardener (W) would be consigned to the class "Farm Labourers." A number of persons, chiefly in Agriculture, may be returned with symbol N.P. in Col. 30. They will be treated as though the entry in this column were W.

12. Parentheses have been used throughout the Alphabetical List where words have been inserted which are not likely to appear on schedules. These words serve to qualify the occupational description and suggest to coders distinctions which must constantly be observed.

13. Such abbreviations in the list as N.S. (not specified) and N.E.S. (not elsewhere specified) are self-explanatory. "Box factory, (n.s.);" means that such expression in the List applies to any case in the schedules where there is no information as to whether it might be a Paper, Wood, etc. box factory. "Assembler—Wood-working factory, (n.e.s.);" means that an assembler in any Wood-working factory not elsewhere specified in the List is to be given the code number for "Assembler—Wood-working factory, (n.e.s.);"

14. In order to avoid unnecessary repetition of terms where some slight variation does not affect the meaning or the coding of a term an instruction has been inserted in the List. For example, where the expressions "Assistant agent, bookkeeper, etc.," or "Deputy assessor, surveyor, etc.," occur in the List the coder is informed that the proper code numbers for such occupational designations on schedules will be found under "Agent," "Bookkeeper," etc., or "Assessor," "Surveyor," etc., since "Assistant bookkeeper," and "Bookkeeper," for example, are occupationally to be treated alike. The coder in dealing with many terms, however, must realize the limiting influence the entry in the industry column may exercise. "Assistant agent—Express Company," would be sought for under "Agent—Express Company" only.

15. Apprentices other than those for which separate classes have been established are to be coded to the occupation or trade to which apprenticed. Apprentices to professional occupations are treated differently.

16. Though the list of public officials in the class 500 of the Classified Index is by no means exhaustive it does indicate that the practice to be followed is to include in this class only those whose duties are of such special character that they cannot be classified elsewhere. A Patent Examiner is coded to 500, whereas a Geologist in Public Service, for example, is coded to the Professional class 569.

17. Managers of special departments of an industry are assigned to an occupational class indicated by the department, not by the industry. "Sales Manager—Auto factory" would be coded to 470, not 220, "Advertising Manager—Radio manufacturing company" to 462 not 310.

18. Farmers will include those for whom the letters E or O (O.A.) have been entered in Col. 30.

19. The coders are referred to the Introduction for an explanation of the way the occupation "Labourer" will be coded to the Classification.

20. It is essential that coders realize how much correct coding will depend upon ascertaining the material worked in. In some cases the occupational description will be sufficient, e.g., where a person is returned as a "Metal grinder" or "Leather cutter." However, in most cases they will have to look to the entry in the industry column for the necessary information to determine the code number. A "Polisher" in a "Brass factory" will be considered a Metal polisher, a "Turner" in a "Furniture factory" a Wood turner, and so on. In some industries, e.g., Shipbuilding, where such workers may be working in wood or metal, much care will be necessary in selecting the more probable chance. Where the Alphabetical List has not covered anyone of these the supervisor should be consulted.

21. Further, where coders meet such expressions in the Alphabetical List (industry column) as "Any—in metal-working industry," "Any—in textile industry," etc., they must be familiar with the metal-working, the textile, and other industries if they are to assign the proper code numbers to the information on the schedules. In other words, they must learn thoroughly the contents of the classes in the Classification of Industries. This knowledge will also be necessary where the instruction in the industry column of the Alphabetical List states "Code to 'Owners, Managers' group indicated by industry." This means that if a return "Manufacturer—Hardware," for example, should be found on a schedule, it would be coded to 220, the "Owners, Managers" group for the metal-working industries.

22. The coders must refer doubtful cases to the supervisor only. In this way the more common sources of difficulty may be brought to the attention of all.

23. All code symbols must be written clearly on the schedules if they are to be accurately punched later.

24. Coders must report all occupational descriptions not in the Alphabetical List to the supervisor.
